A VITAL DECISION

It's 4.30 in the morning, and Tom is drinking a cup of strong coffee. He's been at work since two in the morning, and he's enjoying his first coffee break. He'll stop for a café breakfast at seven, and by lunch time, he'll have finished his work day. He works for a chain of supermarkets as a delivery driver. Nowadays he's used to starting work in the middle of the night, but it wasn't always that way.

'I work five nights a week. But my weekend isn't Saturday and Sunday like most people's. I have Wednesdays and Thursdays off. 'My alarm clock rings at 1.30 in the morning so I can start work at two o'clock. The thing was, when I first started this job, I would go out with my friends on Friday and Saturday nights. I shouldn't have gone, but I couldn't help it. I didn't want to miss out. I was young and inexperienced, and we were having fun.'

Tom says he used to go to bed at midnight some nights and then wake up for work an hour and a half later. 'Fortunately, I never had an accident. But if I'd continued going to work after so little sleep, I was bound to have problems eventually. I might have fallen asleep while I was driving and really hurt –or killed – somebody.'

What changed his mind? 'I read a news story about a lorry driver falling asleep and causing a terrible accident on the motorway. From then on, I made sure I was in bed by 7.00 p.m. at the latest on a night before work. It was hard at first, but I'm used to it now, and I wouldn't change it.'

MISSION TO MARS

It's the year 2035. A bright light flashes across the sky. It looks like a meteor against a beautiful sunset on Earth. But it isn't a meteor. It isn't a sunset. It isn't even Earth. The flash of light comes from a spaceship flying towards Mars.

There are eight crew members inside the spaceship. The sound of the spaceship getting closer to the planet is very loud. It hurts the astronauts' ears, despite their helmets. The ship speeds towards the surface of Mars.

The crew hears something like an explosion. A light flashes on the control panel of the spaceship. "Heat shield away," the commander of the crew says. "Stand by for the parachutes."

Everyone is nervous. They know that if the parachutes don't open, the ship will crash into the planet's surface.

There's another small explosion. Another light on the panel comes on. It shows that the parachutes on the spaceship have opened. They fill with air and slow the spaceship down. The sudden change of speed makes some of the astronauts feel sick to their stomachs.

"Firing retro rockets," says the crew pilot. Six small retro rockets light up under the spaceship. This slows the spaceship even more. Everyone is excited now. They look out the windows as the landscape of Mars comes into view. The astronauts can hardly believe it. After a long journey through space, they're about to be the first humans to land on Mars!
